No Hay Market Killing.
The Kaiser's Mania.

Chicago calls grand jury in special session, to indict swiftly various labor leaders arrested—to some extent on suspicion. The crimes were as atrocious, as deadly to organized labor as to organized society. But these crimes have been compared, with reason, to the famous Hay Market killing of policemen. The law should not imitate the killers and lay itself open to suspicions, as it did before, of killing a certain number "to get even" regardless of guilt. That would be more dangerous than the original crime.

Von Tirpitz says the once Kaiser shows signs of religious mania, and his friends are worried. That is the Associated Press report.

The Kaiser showed signs of religious mania when he started on his war, declaring that the Lord was with him and fighting for him. That was the time for his friends to be worried. A little worry and restraint then would have saved the German people much trouble.

Then he was crazy because he thought God was with him. Now, perhaps, he is crazy because he thinks the Lord has turned against him. But it matters little, since he is out of office. With or without God, he can do nothing without an army.

While Carpentier was knocking out Lewis in about two minutes owners of wireless outfits were listening for news of the fight as it progressed. But there was no fight to speak of. Lewis compared to Carpentier was as small as Carpentier compared with Dempsey. Carpentier did his work more swiftly than Dempsey did his. Fight records show that, pound for pound, the Frenchman is the better fighter. It is not surprising, for Carpentier's weight includes a higher percentage of brain and very blow starts in the brain. Muscles only obey mental orders. In all these fights the importance resides in this: They prove that fighting is the one thing that interests all men. Not a cheerful outlook for war's early end.

Mr. Schwab's Bethlehem company has swallowed the Lackawanna Steel Company, paying sixty-two millions for the mouthful.

There will be agitation in the Kingdom of the Lambs, no kidding whether to buy, sell, or go fishing. Those that go fishing will be the wise lambs.

Schwab is an able steel man, great ship builder. But Gary of the big company has not been idle during the last ten years, and the things he has bought from Cuba to the far Northwest would make Santa Claus envious. If a big steel fight comes, it will be worth watching.

The stealing of $500,000 Liberty bonds from the Chase bank develops a new idea in rascality, according to the police.

A woman asked a jeweler to buy some of the bonds. "Bring them around and I'll let you know," said he. She brought them, was held up and robbed of the bonds in the hall outside the jeweler's office. He, of course, knew a thing about it, was spared the danger of receiving stolen goods. The lady asks: "Is there no honor among thieves?" There is not.

Conan Doyle says that in fifty years his idea of a spirit heaven will "sweep the world and spiritualism will wipe out all religions."

The Doyle pictures of heaven or the afterworld show you spirits with bullet holes in their temples, and mediums bring them back to talk the drivel of a village grocery store.

Doyle does not know human beings if he thinks they will exchange a heaven of harps, wings, singing, gold, and glory for a material heaven which could be built up out of a section of west Chicago. Even Mohammed's heaven is better, because more exciting.

In 1917 the Federal Reserve Bank passed the one-billion mark in its supply of gold. In 1918 it passed the two-billion mark. Two days ago the mark had passed three billions. This does not include other gold hoardings, or our gold tonnage locked up in watches, rings, chains, tooth fillings, etc. The whole thing in itself amounts to nothing—thirty or forty dollars for each inhabitant, one-twentieth of a year's income for the United States, but it makes this nation envied by all other nations. Gold to Christianity is more than the Kaaba stone to Mohammedans, and, whatever your theory of money, gold is power, is real.

The debts of the world's nations, as they stand now amount to four hundred thousand million dollars, according to the National City Bank—just twice what they were when the war ended. Economizing seems not to have been successful. What

MISSING WIFE WAS UNHAPPY, INTIMATE FRIENDS DECLARE

HUSBAND EXPECTS HER BACK

Lockwood Certain She Will Return If She Hasn't Met Foul Play.

Domestic unhappiness has caused Mrs. Catherine Lockwood, pretty wife of W. P. Lockwood, Washington and Virginia real estate operator, to disappear from her home, say her intimate friends here.

Mrs. Lockwood, who is thirty-five years old and of Italian descent, disappeared at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday from her office at the printing establishment of the W. F. Roberts Company, 1415 L street northwest.

Visited at Tea Cup Inn.

This was the last trace of her found by Lockwood, who has instituted a city-wide search for her. Lockwood learned that before going to her office on Wednesday, Mrs. Lockwood presented a bouquet of honeysuckle to Miss Alban Hudson, cashier of the Tea Cup Inn, 732 Fifteenth street northwest. "She did not intimate to me that she planned to leave her home and husband and our two children," said Mr. Lockwood. "She said she had been to her husband's office, where she hung several pictures of herself on the wall. She gave me one of her pictures, asking that I keep it for her several days. The pictures were taken on Monday by J. R. Brooks, who has a studio at 1329 F street northwest."

Lockwood is of the opinion that his wife has been slain, the motive of her slayer being to get her $2,000 worth of diamonds and other gems she took from a safe deposit box on Monday. However, Lockwood's opinion is not agreed with by intimate friends who were made confidants of the missing woman. They say Mrs. Lockwood said on numerous occasions that her married life was not a happy one, one reason given for this condition being that Lockwood was twenty years older than she.

Certain She Will Return.

"If my wife has not been killed, I'm sure she will return in a few days to her home and her children," said Mr. Lockwood today. "She hasn't the heart to stay away from us. I doubt that there is another man in the case. If there should be, however, I will do everything in my power to put him behind prison bars."

Mrs. Lockwood has a large circle of friends and frequently she and her husband entertained at their home in Falls Church. Lockwood received a report that his wife had planned to go back to Italy, she having made a trip to her native country two years ago. He denied, however, this to be true.

"If my wife has not met with foul

Cemetery Is Closed To Bootleggers And Spooners

By International News Service.
MORRISTOWN, Tenn., May 13.—Bootleggers and spooners are to be barred from Morristown's beautiful cemetery.

W. H. Mullins, chairman of the board of trustees, today issued orders for the building for a 45-foot tower on the highest point in the grounds, which will be equipped with a powerful electric searchlight to cast a piercing ray to distinguish faces of persons two miles distant.

The light will be mounted on a revolving pivot and when a bootlegger is spotted it will be held on him until he is arrested or a description obtained.

The cemetery—one of the most beautiful in the South—is situated on a sloping hill, which commands a magnificent view of the city and valley for miles. It is surrounded by many hills and dells, which have made it a favorite place for outlaws for many years.

60,000 ON HAND TO WITNESS BIG KENTUCKY RACE

Morvich Picked to Win at 3 to 5 Odds—Deadlock Seen as Only Contender.

By DAVID J. WAISH.
International News Service Editor.
LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 13.—With the happy, carefree abandon of an advancing army, one of the greatest and most colorful throngs ever known to the American turf is flowing over the extended reaches at Old Churchill Downs today to witness the running of the one and only Kentucky Derby.

Between 50,000 and 60,000 honest souls have inundated the stands, the paddock, and the rail of the track, and more are coming. Personally, we fear the worst for the race, unless they have something in common with the adaptable sardine. Looking out over that seething, milling crowd, the old saw about a trolley car, a woman's heart, and the proverbial fact that there is always room for one more doesn't seem to apply in this case.

Genial Weather Rules.
Between 50,000 and 60,000 honest souls have inundated the stands, the paddock, and the rail of the track, and more are coming. Personally, we fear the worst for the race, unless they have something in common with the adaptable sardine. Looking out over that seething, milling crowd, the old saw about a trolley car, a woman's heart, and the proverbial fact that there is always room for one more doesn't seem to apply in this case.

Genial weather greeted the many visitors to this fair old Southern town on this day of days. A hot sun smiled down from the cloudless heavens and the air had just good enough in it to make life look good, after all.

Morvich and Morvich only, now, forever, and always, is the good word that goes out as the field makes ready to face the barrier.

The Block colt, to hear them tell it, has the race at his mercy, and there is nothing of the kind in the odds on this prohibitive favorite have shrunk like a cotton necktie within the past twenty-four hours.

Starts at Short Odds.

Morvich will start at odds of 3 to 5 and they are the shortest that ever were quoted on a Derby favorite. In 1914, Old Rosebud went to the post at 17 to 20 and that has stood as the record until today. Old Rosebud was a Kentucky bred horse and there was a heap of the old Southern sentiment behind those odds.

There is nothing of the kind influencing the betting on Morvich today. He is the lone outsider in a field of eleven. The others were born and bred in the South, most of them in Kentucky itself. The sentimental betting on Morvich, therefore, is about as conspicuous as a private secretary's wrist watch.

TRAIN HITS REPORT ON MOTOR CAR, BUREAU IS 25 INJURED REJECTED

Three Coaches of Lehigh Valley Flyer Hurlled Down Steep Embankment.

By International News Service.

BATAVIA, N. Y., May 13.—The Black Diamond Express, the crack flier of the Lehigh Valley Railway, while eastbound and traveling more than a mile a minute, struck a motor truck at a grade crossing at North Leroy, which is fifteen miles from Batavia, shortly before 11 o'clock today.

25 Reported Injured.

Three coaches were hurled from the track and rolled down a steep embankment. Word received here is that 25 passengers and trainmen were injured, some seriously.

It is not believed anyone was killed.

Railroad officials here say the injured were immediately put aboard a special train and started for Batavia hospitals.

Latest reports from the scene of the wreck say three persons were killed. One was Thomas Brodie, seventy years old, who drove the motor truck. He was a Leroy farmer. The other persons killed, have not yet been identified. They are thought to be a man and wife. The engineer was E. J. Mosler, of Buffalo.

Statement By Railroad.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad issued the following official statement on the wreck this afternoon: Train No. 10, eastbound, struck an auto truck just east of North Leroy Station, derailed three coaches, which are down the bank, tipped over. A parlor car and diner also were derailed, but they remained upright. The balance of the train remained on the tracks. No report has been received as yet as to the injured.

A few minutes later an official stated that word had been received that thirty persons were injured and one man killed.

The latter was said to have been pinned under the smoking car.

GREAT DAMAGE REPORTED BY FLOOD IN CANADA

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, May 13.—The flood of the Assiniboine river is spreading, and tremendous damage is being done to property, according to information today from Reburn, where the inundation is at its worst.

Roads and ranches are covered with water, and the only transportation is by boat. Fifty head of cattle are isolated on an island which is being washed away.

Reason Not Divulged by Mellon, But Wide Discrepancy Hinted.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon today referred the report of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing investigation back to the investigating committee; Louis A. Hill, director of the bureau; and F. J. Collins, custodian of papers at the bureau.

Differences of unknown magnitude in the report were given as the reason for reconsideration.

All Refuse Comment.

Secretary Mellon received the report from Undersecretary Gilbert after 10 o'clock today, and his order on the report was transmitted at 11 o'clock.

None of those to whom the report was returned would comment on the details of the differences in the report. His connection indicates, it is said, that some grave discrepancy has occurred in the distribution of the paper upon which Federal bonds and notes are printed.

Rumors that the report had been sent to President Harding for consideration during his week-end in Atlantic City were shown to be factless today, when Undersecretary Gilbert, after retaining the report since early yesterday afternoon, submitted it to Secretary Mellon.

The belief that serious changes are made in the report was further borne out by the fact that every official into whose hands the document passed gave it long and secret consideration.

Assistant Deputy Treasurer N. Theodore Tate, chairman of the investigating committee, gave three copies of the report, bound in blue, on extra-size paper, to Undersecretary of the Treasury Gilbert shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday for submission to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. The remaining two copies of the report were temporarily retained by Tate.

Secretary Mellon returned from an appointment outside the Treasury at 8 o'clock, but the report was not

Hearst's Statement On Governorship

Mr. Hearst gave no interview to the United Press. He gave them, in Chicago, the following written statement, which was largely varied in the article sent out as an interview:

To the United Press:

I am sorry that I cannot answer your questions about politics definitely. I have been out West on my ranch. I am going to New York now to find "What all the shooting is about."

I see that Mr. Connors has named me for the governorship. Mr. Connors is one of the best men in the world and one of the most loyal friends. In fact, he is so loyal and big hearted that I am afraid he sees everything with a little prejudice in favor of his friends. I want to have a talk with Mr. Connors.

My idea of the man for the Democrats to nominate for governor is Mayor Hylan. He is a splendid man—a true Democrat in the broad sense of the word. An earnest, faithful public official and capable executive. His policies are sound, his popularity is proved. He is the antithesis, the diametrical opposite, of Governor Miller—and that is the greatest compliment I can pay him.

Governor Miller is representative of a new element in our public life, of men who are openly and avowedly in the service of big interests, men who have a cynical contempt for the public, men who believe that there is a superior class and that it is entitled to superior privileges, men who believe that the government should be run by this superior class for the promotion and protection of those superior privileges, men who think that the citizenship exists not to govern but to be governed, not to progress and prosper, but to be exploited.

Their only interest in the public is contained in the query, "How do the people get the money we take away from them?" This arrogant, un-American attitude on the part of public servants owing allegiance to the big interests is a genuine danger to our republican institutions. It is the beginning of autocracy, that curse of older countries. It is the beginning of the end of democracy. It should be fought to a finish before it gains a foothold.

I am doing my best to fight it in my capacity as a journalist. That way would seem to me the best and most effective way for me to carry on the campaign in defense of the exploited and in defiance of the exploiters, on behalf of honest property earners and property owners as against the bullying, black-jacking big interests.

Of course, any one who dares to take a hand against the aggressions of privilege nowadays is called a Bolshevik or an Anarchist or a Socialist or a Communist. I am not any of these things. I think I am just a plain American. I believe in our American system, and I do not want to see it destroyed. I believe in our republican institutions, and I do not want to see them undermined.

I believe in the rights of property, but more in the rights of property which is earned than in the rights of property which is stolen. At any rate, I am not in favor of the establishment of a special class with the privilege to plunder. That is too radical for me—too radical a departure from our American politics and precedents. I believe that the equal rights, the equal opportunities, the equality before the law, which have been the foundation of our progress and prosperity as a nation and of our contentment as a people, should be conserved. To that extent I am conservative.

But otherwise I am a progressive, because I believe that the art and science of government, like other arts and sciences, should improve and advance, and that there is just as much reason for progress in politics as there is for progress in mechanics.

Principles are eternal, but means and methods improve and advance as the people themselves improve and advance in education and experience. I differ diametrically with the self-styled superior classes and their representatives in that I devoutly believe that there is no wisdom as great as the combined wisdom of the people, no government as good as government by all the people in the interest of all the people.

I believe that the people should have not less and less power of government entrusted to their hands, but continually more and more as the spread of enlightenment, the advance of knowledge, of interchange

SALE AIDED BY LETTER OF HUGHES, IS CHARGE

War Secretary Said to Have Got Private Opinion on Legality of Deal.

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

An informal legal opinion rendered by Secretary of State Hughes to his friend, Secretary of War Weeks, declaring the sale of the Bosch Magneto Company plant to Martin Kern, alleged German alien and ex-convict, was a valid one, was used to boost sales by the firm of Hornblower & Weeks of New York and Boston, which floated the bonds of Kern's organization, according to new disclosures today in the war fraud scandal.

In Ignorance of Details.

Secretary Hughes did not know of Kern's record when he rendered the opinion or of other transactions since revealed, it is stated. Secretary Weeks, it is charged, asked him for the opinion, as one friend to another.

After Secretary Hughes had declared the Bosch sale by the Government valid on examination of papers laid before him, Secretary Weeks, it is charged, had the opinion dictated to a stenographer and without Mr. Hughes' knowledge, it was used widely by salesmen of Hornblower & Weeks to promote the sale of the bonds and stocks of Kern's organization, the American Bosch Company, it is claimed.

Secretary Weeks was an active member of Hornblower & Weeks before he entered the Cabinet and at the time of the alleged fraudulent transactions connected with the sale of the Bosch property to Kern.

"One of the chief actors in these transactions was the firm of Hornblower & Weeks, a banking and brokerage house in New York and Boston," Congressman Woodruff of Michigan declared in the House.

Million, Estimated Profit.

"It appears from information obtained from reliable sources and from figures taken from the books of the American Bosch-Magneto Company that the profit realized by the firm of Hornblower & Weeks was probably $1,000,000 or more, and that the profits which Mr. Kern realized ran to many hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Woodruff charges that Kern, after the exposure of his deal with the Government in which former Attorney General Palmer and Francis Garvan, alien custodian during Palmer's administration, were involved, wrote in a letter to Paris to one of his attorneys: "Why don't Murray and all interests take John W. Weeks to Daugherty and put a quietus to this thing?"

"The Murray he refers to was one of the men who was associated with him in a deal and who afterward became president of the American Bosch Magneto Company," Woodruff said.

Wanted Inquiry Dropped.

"The other gentlemen he referred to are, respectively, the Secretary of War and the Attorney General, and the thing upon which he wished a quietus was the agitation in the public press for criminal prosecution by the Department of Justice in connection with the matter."

The war fraud scandal will be a political issue if Congress refuses to call a special investigation, Woodruff, a Republican, declared today.

He announced that the granting of an appropriation of $500,000 asked by Attorney General Daugherty to facilitate the work of investigating war frauds by the Department of Justice will cause no let-up in the efforts to secure a Congressional investigation.

"We want to make sure that all the facts come out this time," Woodruff said.

Fund for Prosecution of War Grafters to Be Voted on Monday

By International News Service.
Congress pushed ahead today in granting Attorney General Daugherty an additional half million dollars to set up a new bureau in the Department of Justice for investigation and prosecution of war contract frauds.

An appropriation bill carrying Daugherty's request was favorably reported by the House and the man Madden, of the Appropriations
